

Movi as a service

Questmark and Simplicity Conferencing are now offering a service which provides access to video communications for users without having to have a dedicated meeting room facility. The application is designed to extend the use of video meetings to smaller offices, individuals on the road, home office staff and into projects and supply chains. The service is based on the industry leading Tandberg Movi client which provides excellent video and audio quality for users and ensures connectivity to all standards based videoconference facilities.

All that is required is a PC with a web-cam and an internet connection. For a fixed monthly fee per user you can make unlimited use of the service for meetings within your organisation and through the Simplicity service to any other business also using standards based video. We take care of the details; the user only has to open a simple application on their PC and connect. To ensure the quality is the highest possible we recommend use of the Tandberg HD Webcam (as shown in the picture), we can provide pricing for this with the Movi service.

The Movi service is fully compatible with the full range of standards based videoconferencing systems and can be used to connect to any of your organisations video meeting rooms and through access to the Simplicity virtual meeting room service you can connect to multiple locations simultaneously. The Simplicity service also ensures maximum utilisation and full backward compatibility with legacy videoconference systems, even those on ISDN networks.

Movi can be purchased as a single user or multiple license(s). The basic Movi software is free of charge and can run on any number of PC's, users with the log-on details can then go to one of the PC's with the software and log onto the service. This allows full flexibility as the user is not fixed to one PC to use this service. It also means that organisations with many possible participants using PC's can purchase a fixed amount of licenses and provide them to numerous users or as a departmental resource, only the amount of licenses purchased can use the service at any one time but this opens the opportunity for usage to many more people.

Movi, the Simplicity Conferencing services and the leading installation and support service from Questmark used in conjunction with the Tandberg range of meeting room class equipment minimises the investment risk in this application and ensures a strong return.

Pricing for all of the services and products noted herein are available from Questmark Ltd or Simplicity Conferencing.
